

Selected Studies in International Migration and Immigrant Incorporation

Marco Martiniello and Jan Rath (ed.)

The book

'Martiniello and Rath have assembled a collection of must-read, though sometimes hard-to-find, pieces that any scholar or student interested in immigration to Europe and its consequences will want to consult. Collated from a broad variety of sources and representing a diverse set of approaches, theoretical commitments, and disciplines, this book is an essential resource.' -Professor Roger Waldinger, University of California Los Angeles

European migration and ethnic studies are on the rise. They are, however, highly fragmented and oriented towards the US and other typical countries of immigration. This comprehensive textbook – the first in a set of four volumes – encompasses theoretically-oriented essays that have set a benchmark for research in Europe or reflect a European perspective. The book provides a wealth of material on the crystallisation of ideas and legislation on citizenship in Western Europe in the 20th century, as well as tracing the increasingly stark separation between immigrant and citizen.
